

The website NuitFrance is already two months old

In early september 2014, a new website to release information and share knowledge, dedicated to night, nocturnal biodiversity and light pollution in France was borned, named NuitFrance, on the initiative of Romain Sordello* :

<http://www.nuitfrance.fr>

As a reminder, NuitFrance includes a citation database (scientific papers, books, videos, ...). Within two months, about 800 references have been centralized and hundreds are going to be included, in particular because of the persons who proposed to share their bibliography.

Since opening NuitFrance, new sections have been developped, including a page devoted to the international issues and a gallery with photos in open access that already offers more than a hundred pictures.

During these two months, more than 7 000 persons visited NuitFrance, representing almost 45 000 page views (See Statistics section). Many people and organisms, in France and all over the world, relayed NuitFrance (See Network/press section).

Sincerely thanks to all these visitors, collaborators, relays and supports.

*Romain Sordello is an expert in biodiversity, and nocturnal one makes part of his specialisations. With his scientific knowledges and his graphic and webmastering skills and because he was aware of the need for a website about these issues for different actors, he imagined and concretised NuitFrance.

<http://www.romain-sordello.fr>